

Wonder Media Ideas

Pre-Conference use

What ideas do you have for bringing Wonder Media activities and resources to tweens and teens?	Votes
Use this as part of our “adulting” series for teens - how to navigate the media	6
Connecting with all schools for training	3
Use with my Teen Advisory Board to generate conversation	3
Create a program series for teens and tweens about media, digital, and news literacy using these activities to reinforce ideas	3
Work with school librarians to time programming to local schools' curriculums - teachers may be willing to give extra credit to students who attend	3
Don't forget about local private schools	3
Get opinions from TAB how to use the site for programs	2
Media literacy expo that shows all the resources in the county to help with teaching and learning media and digital literacy.	2
Passive programs for the teen room, a mix of media literacy and 250 celebration. There can be a laptop set up to play Whose Story Gets Told, and have the paper sheets for teens to tell their own story and hang them up in the teen room.	2
Coordination with Mid school media specialist. Leverage marketing resources and remember you may only have one shot to teach them.	1
Use WM in programming during Civic Season (Juneteenth to July Fourth)	1
Statewide training for all library staff not just YS since all library staff interact with people that could benefit from wonder media	1
Local churches who offer youth groups/services might be interested in this type of programming	1
For those looking for the next level of curricular engagement (deeper or for older students), point them to the News Literacy Project. These could work so well paired or scaffolded	1
Work with a local museum to maybe do a similar exhibition; with permission	0
To host a "Teacher Orientation " before school starts and include Wonder Media with teachers as a resource they can leverage or send students to the library for programs.	0
