The Planets

“In the Planets, we encounter an imagination inflamed and incited by archetypal imagery...a transforming knowledge which can only be acquired through learning that is far beyond intellect alone.”

Ouranos as The Starry Sky

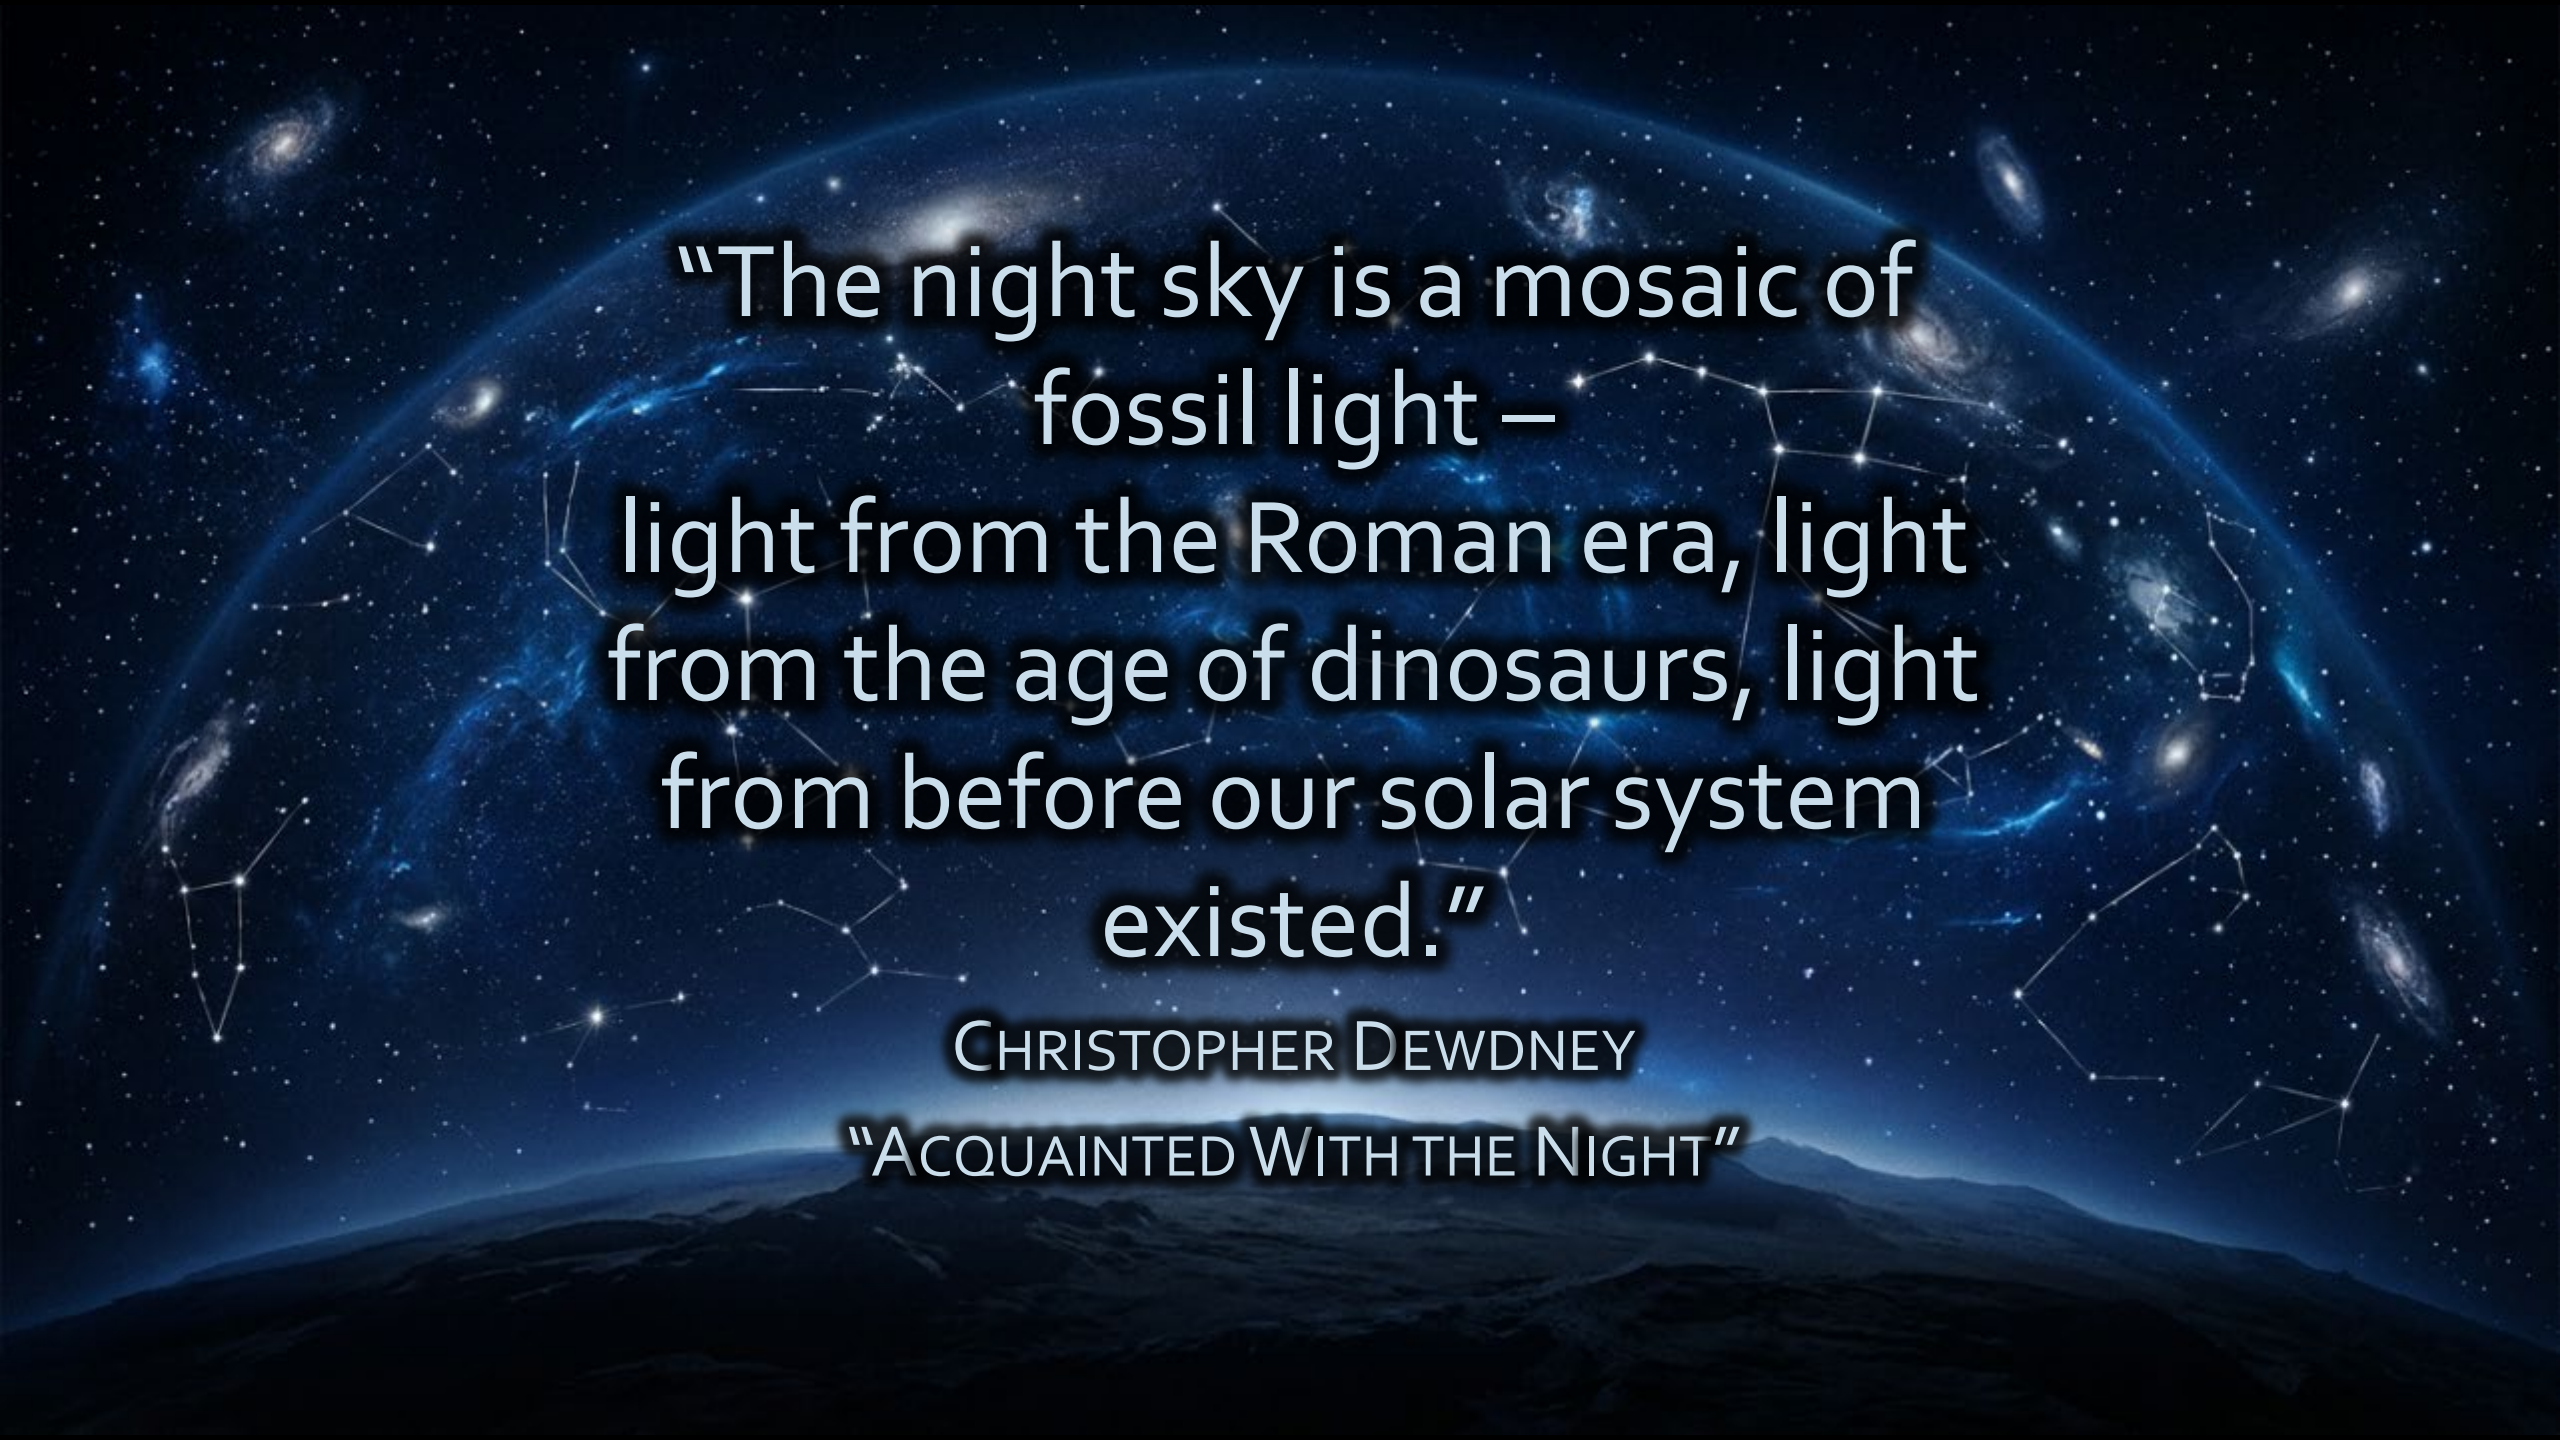

“Gaia, for her part, bore,
first of all and as her equal,
the Starry Sky, Ouranos, so that he should completely cover her.”

KARL KERÉNYI

“THE GODS OF THE GREEKS”

"The night sky is a mosaic of fossil light –
light from the Roman era, light
from the age of dinosaurs, light
from before our solar system
existed."

The Starry Sky Remains

The background is a deep blue space filled with stars and constellations. In the upper center, there is a large, glowing blue planet with visible atmospheric bands and a system of rings. Surrounding the planet are several constellations, including one that resembles a scorpion. To the left and right of the planet are bright, glowing star clusters or nebulae. The overall scene is a celestial map or a representation of the universe.
